

POPULAR COLMA GIRL STABBED BY UNIDENTIFIED MAN

Miss Geraldine Silicani, aged 18, a stenographer, daughter of Mrs. Hans Nelson of Werner avenue, Colma, lies at the point of death at the South San Francisco hospital, where she was taken following an attack by an unidentified man early Thursday morning.

Miss Silicani was returning home early Thursday morning after spending the evening in San Francisco with a girl friend. After alighting from the 12 o'clock car at Mission street, she had just passed the Colma fire house when an unidentified man, who was standing by the side of a parked car, asked her to go for a ride with him. Upon her refusal, he grappled with her and tried to force her into the car. After putting up a desperate struggle, and screaming for help, Miss Silicani was stabbed six times by her assailant, the stab wounds being in her hand, side and abdomen, one of the stab wounds puncturing the liver.

Following his attack upon the girl, the mysterious assailant jumped into his machine and sped away.

Miss Silicani was barely able to stagger into the Imperial Cafe, where she uttered a few words before becoming unconscious. W. T. Snow rushed the wounded girl to the South San Francisco hospital, where she was given immediate attention. At this writing it is reported that she is in a serious condition.

Miss Silicani is of a quiet, retiring disposition, and is highly spoken of by all who know her, making it all the more mysterious as to the reason for the brutal attack.

Constable S. A. Landini and a posse of citizens have been searching continuously for the girl's assailant ever since she reported the attack, and it is sincerely hoped that he will be captured. As Miss Silicani was unable to give a description of her assailant, however, the officers have a difficult task confronting them.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS REOPEN NEXT MONDAY

The summer vacation, so full of pleasure, is about over, and nobody is sorry. There is a feeling of contentment with the going back to work. On next Monday, August 12, every teacher and nearly all the boys and girls will be at their posts of duty, ready to do something toward advancement.

During the vacation the careful trustees have been busy planning in order to make things fresher and neater around the school buildings. The woodwork on the outside of the General Pershing, the R. S. Thornton and Woodrow Wilson schools has been repainted, and the result is a pronounced improvement. New shades have been put up at the Vista Grande and the old desks of the Jefferson look like new ones now. Even the primitive Jefferson Hall has been given new mud sills and made firm for another decade.

The sad event of the vacation was the passing away of Miss Agnes Gallagher, who had been a teacher in the Colma school for a quarter of a century. Miss Agnes Flynn, a dependable teacher in the Jefferson Hall for three years past, has been assigned to a position in the schools of her home district, Redwood City. Everyone is sorry to lose her from this district, but it was greatly to her advancement to go to Redwood City, so she is entitled to general congratulation. These two vacancies have been filled by the appointment of Miss Evelyn Lagomarsino and Miss Dorothy Hamilton, both of whom are highly recommended.

There is every reason to expect that the coming year's achievements will be fully up to the high standard of the past. Such is the ambition of every teacher and pupil.

The regular monthly meetings of the Board of Trustees will take place during this school year on the last Thursday instead of the last Wednesday evening of each month. This change was necessary in order to accommodate one of the trustees, whose occupation requires him to be at his work on Wednesday evenings.

CHIEF KENNEDY ATTENDS STATE FIREMEN'S MEETING

Fire Chief J. J. Kennedy, accompanied by his wife and family, left last Saturday by motor for Fullerton, where he will represent the Daly City fire department at the seventh annual session of the California State Firemen's Association.

The first annual convention of this association was held in Oakland, in 1923, with a membership of 800. This year they go to the southland for their seventh annual convention with a paid up membership of over 5,000.

FIREMEN PICNIC AT MENLO PARK

The members of Company No. 4, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, with their families and many friends, motored to Gilmore's Park, Menlo Park, last Sunday, where they held their annual picnic.

As usual a delicious barbecue lunch was served by the committee. During the afternoon the young folks enjoyed dancing.

The day will long be remembered by the following, who made the trip to Menlo Park: Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McGuinn and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Hilton, Mr. and Mrs. Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. Ed O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. R. Foppiano, Mr. and Mrs. E. Jodan and son James, Mr. and Mrs. J. Cosbie and son Jack, Mr. and Mrs. J. Viotti and sons Raynol and Elmo, Mr. and Mrs. A. Vireno, Misses Mable and Esther Vireno, Andrew Vireno, Mr. and Mrs. E. Cuneo and daughters, Miss Eva Menconi, Mr. and Mrs. George Augustien and family, Mr. H. Rolf, Mr. Lee Longfellow, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Klussen, Mr. and Mrs. Harrel Chandler and children, and Jeff Lee.

THE EAGLES NEST

At the last regular meeting, on Thursday, the Fraternal Order of Eagles had a very good attendance. The meeting was a spirited one and it seems that every meeting is better than the previous one. Some inspirational talks were made by Brothers Bolger, Rodenberg, Schramm and Adams.

During the business session ten applications were voted upon and approved. The initiation class for the 15th is proving to be a large one. We need that candidate that lives next door to you. Sign him up today.

The sick committee reported all sick brothers on the road to recovery.

On Monday evening twenty members of the good will committee went to Half Moon Bay to pay a visit to that Aerie. Redwood City Aerie was there with twenty members, San Mateo with ten, and South San Francisco with six. Although Half Moon Bay did not know that such crowds were coming, they were equal to the occasion and prepared a very sumptuous repast. The meeting proved to be a hummer, as Redwood City brought their Hay-wire orchestra along, which entertained the crowd with a goodly number of pieces.

Brother Stebanne, of Redwood City, was chairman of the meeting, and of course our good friend "Spots" Nesser could not be overlooked as an important cog in the machine of progress in anything pertaining to Eagle-dom. The meeting was enlivened by the wit of Dr. Steele, the congenial and affable physician of Half Moon Bay, also by talks from the various visiting brothers.

The next meeting of all the Aeries will be held in Daly City on August 22. Please mark that down in your note book. Every Eagle belonging to Colma-Vista Grande should be at that meeting, as the other Aeries are raking their towns to bring a good delegation.

Who is the weather prophet of Colma-Vista Grande Aerie?

Who claimed a puncture as an excuse for being late at Half Moon Bay?

Who had springs on their seat at the last meeting?

Does a windmill run by water?

What business man of Daly City was missing at the last meeting?

Where is your candidate? On vacation. Bring him in anyway.

The guests were: Norman Evans, Ruth Shade, Rita Skove, John Shade, LeRoy Curry, Roy Wilson, George Wilson, Gertrude Meyers, Mrs. Skove, Mrs. O. Diethman, Mrs. Meyers, Mrs. B. Wilson and Mrs. Shade.

KEAGLE PITCHES ONE HIT CONTEST

The Jefferson All Stars played errorless ball behind Gene Keagle's superb twirling to defeat the Swift & Co.'s nine, 10 to 0, last Sunday, at Fleishacker's Park.

Keagle allowed only one hit, a single in the third inning, struck out ten batters and issued one base on balls.

Swede Nystrom was the batting star for the day, garnering three hits out of four trips to the plate and drove in five runs. C. Aiello and W. Simmons, the newly acquired first baseman, each clouted a triple.

The fine work of G. Cairlo, catcher, was one of the features of the contest. He had Gene pitching to him all the time and did not allow any trick to pass his vision.

The infielders played as if they were inspired, allowing not a single close play, and the outfielders came through to furnish the batting power.

Gene Keagle, the Jefferson All Star chucker, has an impressive record. He has struck out 59 batters in 53 innings, walked 25 in the same number, and allowed 47 hits. Gene also ranks high in batting average. He is hitting at a .308 clip, and has a fielding average of .909, accepting eleven chances with only one error charged against him.

Crossing the home plate 17 times in nine games, Mo Plansky leads the All Stars in scored runs. C. Aiello is second with 16 tallies. The team as a whole has 104 completed circuits to its credit.

MERCHANTS DEFEAT SAN FRANCISCO TEAM

The Daly City Merchants breezed in to an easy victory over the General Petroleum team of San Francisco at the Jefferson Union high school field last Sunday. The Merchants started out with a vicious batting attack in the first inning and kept right on, the final score being 25 to 4. Joe Drucker garnered five hits in six trips to the plate. The hitting of the entire team featured the game, the Daly City boys sending the old reliable S. Beck to the showers early in the contest. Randall, the Merchants' pitcher, twirled his usual steady game. The final score was:

	R.	H.	E.
Daly City Merchants	25	29	1
General Petroleum	4	9	4

COLMA RANCHER DROWNED IN LAKE

"Drowned in a lake at Cypress Lawn cemetery, Lawndale, under mysterious circumstances" was the verdict of the coroner's jury last Tuesday in the inquest on the death of Nicola Mercurio, Colma rancher, whose body was found floating in the lake at Cypress Lawn on Saturday. The inquest was conducted by Dr. J. C. McGovern at the S. Nieri funeral parlors in South San Francisco.

Mercurio's body was found floating in a small artificial lake in Cypress Lawn cemetery late Saturday. Bruises on the head led to the belief, when the body was recovered from the lake, that Mercurio had met with foul play, but when an autopsy revealed that death had been due to drowning, the theory of suicide was advanced.

Substantiating the suicide theory was a note found on a table in the ranch house. Mercurio had bequeathed $30 and his personal effects to his wife, Mrs. Marie Mercurio, of Genoa, Italy.

Mercurio was co-partner with Angelo Guiffra and E. P. Grandona on the Rossi ranch.

Sheriff James J. McGrath and Constable S. A. Landini have searching parties looking for Guiffra, who disappeared right after he had identified Mercurio's body at the undertaking parlors. Guiffra, according to the authorities, had $900 on his person when last seen.

No clue has, at this writing, been found of the whereabouts of Guiffra. According to Chief of Police Joseph Cavello of Lawndale, Guiffra was last seen in Colma on Friday morning. According to Cavello, no suspicion of the death of Mercurio is attached to Guiffra, who has been missing since Mercurio disappeared from the ranch owned jointly by Mercurio, Guiffra and Tony Garandona.

According to police reports, Mercurio was temporarily demented at the ranch Wednesday night. Guiffra's efforts to quiet him proving fruitless, he early Thursday morning called upon Chief of Police Cavello to assist him in quieting Mercurio.

Murcurio disappeared from the ranch shortly afterward and was later found in the lake at Cypress Lawn.

Dr. Thorstein D. Veblen, nationally known as the "laughing philosopher," died last Saturday at his home on Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, from a heart attack. Although he spent most of his life as an economist, author and editor, Dr. Veblen was perhaps best known for the many quips he coined in his writings and comments.

The city of Palo Alto has filed a complaint with the Railroad Commission against the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, in which the commission is asked to require that company to supply natural gas to the city at wholesale rates for distribution, said rates to be fixed by the commission. The city is now purchasing manufactured gas from the company.

COMMITTEE WILL STUDY MOVES FOR COUNTY CHARTER

The co-operation of the San Mateo county board of supervisors in plans under discussion for obtaining an expression of county sentiment on a new charter and redistricting was assured last Monday when the board appointed a special committee to make a study of the two movements.

Actual consideration of the petitions for calling a special election was put over until the first meeting in September, after it was found that the pressure of business made it necessary to take the hearing off the calendar for the afternoon session.

In order that every angle of the situation may be presented at the September hearing, the chairman of the board of supervisors, Dr. C. V. Thompson, of Pescadero, appointed the special committee on motion of Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey. The committee will be asked to confer with the sponsors of the two movements and report to the board on its findings. This committee will comprise Horace W. Amphlett, chairman; John W. Coleberd, of South San Francisco; Mayor C. A. Buck, of Burlingame; Mayor William H. Taylor, of San Mateo; Elmore B. Hinman, of Redwood City; Dr. C. L. Morgan, of Half Moon Bay; and W. A. Weeden, of Menlo Park.

Belmont grammar school district bonds of $15,000 were sold by the board to the National Bank of Italy, which offered a $28 premium. There were four bidders.

Los Lomitas school district bonds of $12,000 were sold to the firm of Freeman, Smith & Campe, which offered a $192 premium.

A resolution was adopted calling for reorganization of the Belmont water district under the 1923 Sanitary act, with the same boundaries. The petition was introduced by Attorney Ernest Wilson of San Mateo.

A meeting calling for formation of the Pescadero lighting district was set for August 19, so that the map of the proposed area may be changed to exclude unnecessary farm lands.

Julius S. Godeau, of Redwood City, granted the board a deed to a 40-foot right of way on his property on the Redwood-Pescadero road. It was accepted.

FINAL WOODLAND THEATRE CONCERT NEXT SUNDAY

The final concert of the fourth season of open air concerts presented by the Philharmonic Society of San Mateo county on Sunday afternoons during the summer will be given next Sunday afternoon, with the eminent European conductor, Bruno Walter, wielding the baton.

If the experience of previous seasons is any criterion, the capacity of the little outdoor theatre will be taxed to the utmost by the throngs of music lovers who will be anxious to take advantage of the final opportunity this summer to hear a symphonic program in the ideal setting which the Woodland Theatre at Hillsborough affords.

In all of the music capitals of Europe where great festivals are given, Bruno Walter is constantly in demand to conduct special programs, particularly those made up of the works of Mozart, Schubert and Wagner. For some fourteen years Walter has been general artistic director of the Mozart Festival annually given in Salzburg, and last year, when Max Reinhardt, Europe's most famous producer and stage conductor, was asked to name the musical director for the Festival given in Paris, he named Walter as the one preeminently fitted for this tremendous task.

Mozart's Symphony in E Flat major, which is only occasionally heard, will be the principal offering of the afternoon, but the entire program is of unusual interest.

A NEW ZEALAND VISITOR

Miss Alvin England, of Otorohanga, New Zealand, spent the week end recently with the Bennett family. Miss England's home is near Mrs. Geo. Cockburn, Mrs. Bennett's sister, who Mrs. Bennett has not seen in twenty-three years. Mrs. Bennett was delighted to hear all the news about her sister and family. On Sunday, Colin Bennett took Miss England up in his airplane, her first trip, and she enjoyed it immensely. As Miss England is to be in the States for a year, the Bennetts expect to see her many times before she returns home.

COUNTY HAS GONE INTO THE MOVIES

(From the Redwood City Tribune)

San Mateo county has gone into the movies. And a beautiful "star" she makes, too.

And while we are passing the compliments around, we might as well say a good word for Roscoe Wyatt, manager of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, who directed the pictures, and his cameraman, an Eastbay expert. They have done an excellent job.

Two reels of the film entitled "California's Picturesque Peninsula" were exhibited at the Tribune office today to members of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce following the luncheon of that organization at the New Canton Cafe.

Through an arrangement Wyatt is making with eighteen universities throughout the United States, it will be possible to give the film widespread showings, at a low cost. Clubs, schools and other organizations may obtain this film from the educational films of the libraries for non-theatrical use.

Already the film, and also another picture produced by Wyatt to show the industrial advantages of San Mateo county, has been shown at Exposition Park, Los Angeles.

will be shown any time here on request.

It opens with a picture prologue depicting these words: "As the sun rises in the East, so came the dawn of civilization. Out of the mists of this early dawn pulsing waves of migrating men swept from the East seeking that something in the West. Came Phoenician traders, Goth invaders, Viking raiders—and Columbus found a New World. Then came the Pilgrims, the Pioneers, the plainsmen and the Padres. That for which all so long sought has here been found at the end of the White Man's World—California."

Next are shown the scenic, historic, Picturesque Peninsula, the climatic advantages of San Mateo county. Beauty and business are shown as close kin through scenes of flowering fields which produce an annual bouquet worth more than seven million dollars. Mountain streams, redwood forests, the roaring surf, sequestered lakes and pastoral scenes are shown.

All in all, it should make the Easterner's mouth water.

The iceman who dropped a fifty-pound cake on the landlady's foot begged to be excused for a slip of the tongue.

Appropriately enough, Charlie Fudge headed a Chattanooga delegation to the recent confectioners' convention in Atlanta.

ETHEL BARRYMORE COMING TO THE CURRAN THEATRE

Ethel Barrymore, foremost actress on the English-speaking stage, will appear in the Curran Theatre in San Francisco for a limited engagement beginning on Monday night, August 12, in two unusual plays under the management of Lee Shubert. G. Martinez Sierra's profoundly moving Spanish drama, "The Kingdom of God," translated by Helen and H. Granville Barker, will be acted for two weeks beginning on Monday, August 12, and Lili Hatvany's sophisticated, modern play, "The Love Duel," adapted by Zoe Akins, will be presented for two weeks only beginning on Monday, August 26. There will be matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays, but no performances on Sundays.

"The Kingdom of God" gives Miss Barrymore the kind of role she has never acted before, that of Sister Gracia, who is seen first at the age of 16, then at 19, and finally at 70. This is not a religious play, nor is Sister Gracia a nun. The drama shows life in present-day Spain. "The Love Duel" is a brilliant, worldly picture of continental society of post-war years. Baroness Hatvany is a leading figure in European literary and social circles. Here Miss Barrymore appears in the kind of character audiences so frequently have seen her act. It is in direct contrast to Sister Gracia of the Spanish play and reveals the versatility and art of the great actress.

Miss Barrymore made her stage debut at the age of 14 in her grandmother, Mrs. John Drew's company. Her first outstanding success was in "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines," which elevated her to the rank of a star. Probably no other actress of this generation has played so many and such varied plays. She has ranged from Shakespeare, Sheridan and Ibsen to Galsworthy, Pinero, Maugham, Barrie and other leading present-day dramatists.

Louis Calhern is leading man for Miss Barrymore and appears in both "The Kingdom of God" and "The Love Duel." The supporting company numbers fifty players. The settings for the two plays were designed by Watson Barrett, from sketches he made during his European visit last year. Because of the elaborate productions, Miss Barrymore appears only in San Francisco and Los Angeles in California.

COUNTY EDUCATORS DISCUSS PROBLEMS OF SUPERVISION

Pansy Jewett Abbott, county superintendent of schools, and Eleanor Freeman, rural supervisor, were called to the San Jose Teachers' College on Friday of last week to talk before a group of graduate students on the problems of supervision. Miss Abbott discussed the community projects made by the pupils in the rural schools of San Mateo county which have attracted state-wide attention. Miss Freeman told of the teacher activities which have prepared them to receive the new reading curriculum issued by the San Mateo county board of education for use in the elementary schools of this county.

Miss Elsie Toles, head of the department of rural education, and Dr. Freeland, head of the teacher training division of the San Jose Teachers' College, are interested in the problems of San Mateo county. They are to co-operate with the office of the county superintendent of schools in the cadet training now offered students as well as in the model school to be established in Portola this month.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company has announced that plans are complete to supply San Rafael with natural gas.

One of the largest collections of mounted deer heads in California burned when fire destroyed the Buckhart cigar store at Paso Robles.

Shipments of a carload of soapstone to the bay region was made by W. H. King of Fulga recently from his Feather River Canyon soapstone mine.

Bids for $130,000 in bonds of the San Rafael High School District and the San Rafael school district, authorized at a recent election, will be opened by the Board of Supervisors on Tuesday, August 13.

A contract for construction of 10.3 miles of asphalt highway between Chualar and Salinas in Monterey county to cost $236,484.85 was let by the State Department of Public Works to the Peninsula Paving Company of San Francisco.

W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general and chief of the airmail service, will visit Postmaster John R. Chace when he comes West in September to attend the national convention of postmasters at Sacramento.

Stanislaus County's assessable wealth for 1929 is $747,665 greater than it was in 1928, according to figures released by George Threlfall, Stanislaus County assessor. Last year the valuation was placed at $56,213,060 while this year it is $56,960,725.

Prisoners in the Napa county jail see a slimmer bill of fare in the offing. Shorter rations are expected as a result of the supervisors cutting their daily food allowance from 75 cents a day to 60 cents. Sheriff J. P. Steckler supervises the purchase of provisions for the jail inmates. They are permitted to buy sweets and tobacco with their own money.

A few fortunate San Joseans shortly will get sight of a $5,000,000 check, perhaps the first one of this size to be sent there. The check will come to San Jose in connection with the sale of the San Jose Water Company to the P. W. Chapman Company. The sale will be completed September 28.

A deed conveying thirty acres of land at San Quentin to the State of California was filed by the Golden Gate Ferry Company in the Marin County recorder's office at San Rafael. The land adjoins and will become part of the San Quentin prison grounds. The purchase price named in the deed is $45,000.

Six new lights will be placed on the Sacramento River, October 1, according to an announcement by H. W. Rhodes, superintendent of light-houses. The announcement names them as follows: Pynes Point light, Content light, Free Port Bend South light, Glide Ferry light, Dippenbrooks light and the River View Upper Jetty light.

Residents of Gerber, division point on the Southern Pacific lines, near Red Bluff, are preparing a petition to the company, asking a park and home products exhibits building for the Gerber railroad yards. It is estimated that 1600 travelers stop in Gerber every day from ten to twenty minutes while trains are being serviced.

The McCord River Lumber Company is building a new logging town in the western part of Modoc county. Three hundred men are employed in the camp, now a short distance from White Horse. A billion and a half feet of lumber is to be cut in holdings the company recently acquired there. Three hundred thousand feet a day is now being cut.

Fire Chief Fred Rogers of Centerville will ask the county board of supervisors to order all road sprinklers to remain filled at all times and to be ready to proceed to various sections in the district in case of fire. The reason for such a request is to afford protection to districts not protected by fire hydrants, the chief said.

The State Highway Commission has thrown open seven miles of new road along the Red Bluff-Susanville highway, between Red Bluff and Mineral, entrance to Lassen Volcanic National Park, to motorists, and a big increase in travel has been noted. The new route eliminates the dangerous Inskip grade. The road was constructed by San Quentin convicts.

Facing a growing burden, California with more than 24,000 charges in public institutions is finding mental disease more costly than crime and delinquency. With 24,390 men and women, girls and boys under surveillance or lock and key in fourteen hospitals, prisons or schools, 16,739 are inmates of the state's six mental hospitals and two homes for the feeble-minded children. On parole are 4959 persons and the general tendency of those is to stay away, Jensen reported. The population of Folsom is 2223 and San Quentin prison, 4143 men and 106 women.

California now has 10,845 registered nurses, an increase over last year of 1875, according to figures made public by the State Department of Public Health. Six hundred and seventy-three nurses registered during the first six months of 1929 by examination and 716 through reciprocity agreements with other states.

More than $250,000 in building permits were granted in Santa Cruz during the first six months in 1929 than during the corresponding period last year. During the last six months the permits totaled $624,035.

The Kitchen Cabinet

(© 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

There is only one type of artist whose achievements make every type of society from the earliest to the latest; and that creator is motherhood.—W. Shaw Apparrow.

SOME DAINTIES

There are appetizers, canapes, hors d'oeuvres (call them by any name, they are as zestful) used to begin or end a meal; but the nicest of all at this season of the year is an appealing one of fruit.

The prettiest of all plate covers when serving fruit is the green leaf of the fruit served. When this is not obtainable other leaves such as apple, plum or any pretty foliage will be acceptable.

Cherries With Orange.—Place a spray of cherry leaves on a glass plate, arrange three or four sections of orange, membrane removed, with three cherries, large, ripe and luscious with stems placed between the sections. Grapefruit may be used and if carefully done may be eaten from the fingers as are the cherries, of course.

Fruit Balls.—Take the pink center of the watermelon, scoop out into balls with a potato cutter, place in sherbet cups, pour over a chilled sauce of orange juice and sugar and top with a sprig of mint; place on a leaf-covered plate.

Strawberry Appetizer.—Now that strawberries are to be had almost any time of the year, from the south, to the northern everbearing, one may have these berries for an occasional dish for the first course. Place a heap of powdered sugar molded in a small glass in the center of each dish. Arrange the beautiful fruit well washed and drained dry, unhusked and with the stems on if possible, around the cone of sugar.

Vegetable Melange Salad.—Take one cupful of string beans and one cupful of peas, both cooked with a pinch of sugar in the water; if not add it to the vegetables. Add one cupful of finely shredded cucumber and one-half cupful of crisp, tender radishes, sliced unpeeled. Add a french dressing and let stand one-half hour. Take six hard-boiled eggs, cut off the ends so they will stand upright, cut into halves. Arrange crisp lettuce leaves around each egg and place some of the vegetable mixture on the leaves. Serve very cold with mayonnaise.

Oyster Plant With Herbs.—Wash and scrape oyster plant and cut into half-inch slices. Cook in boiling salted water until soft; drain, add butter to season, sprinkle with chopped parsley, chives and salt and pepper. Serve hot.

The Efficient Kitchen. Now-a-days with the colorful kitchens and breakfast nooks so common, it seems trite to talk of kitchen conveniences.

But there are thousands of homes yet where the housewife walks miles to prepare and serve a meal, where the kitchen stove, sink and table are hardly within speaking distance. These old fashioned kitchens are still far too common, and they are treasures, too, for by remodeling one may have a small kitchen with equipment conveniently placed and a cosy breakfast nook with benches that push under the table when not in use, leaving space for ironing or dressmaking, with good light and every convenience.

The proper arrangement of kitchen equipment is not a passing fad, but a most serious problem, worthy of thought and planning.

Where the kitchen is small the work table covered with zinc or with a porcelain top stands in the center of the room, over it is arranged a hanging shelf with place for the much used utensils to hang underneath. The shelf may contain the pretty jars for salt, sugar and such condiments used in every day cooking. This table with shelf may be placed against the wall, if it is more convenient in the smaller home; then the sink, stove and table are all within easy reach, saving much walking.

Hang the measuring cups and small things within easy reach and always place them there. When dishwashing, if the cupboard is near the sink, the dishes may be wiped and placed on the shelves without another handling, which saves many hours in the space of a year.

Have the sink, table and all equipment such as ironing board and tubs so placed that they will be convenient for your height. Stopping over a table or tub has caused the ruin of many good dispositions and the breaking down of many arches. The ideal floor is a pine one, covered with the best of linoleum. Tile floors are beautiful, but unless covered with many rubber mats, killing for the feet. Hardwood floors well varnished may be easily kept clean and always look well.

A large tray or a tea wagon for removing soiled dishes from the table, and carrying food to and from the dining table is a great step-saver. The handy boy with his tools can make a very good tea wagon, as many have done in the schools.

Wildcat Swap Brings

Hunter Heavy Fine
Harrisburg, Pa.—The difference between three wildcats killed in Pennsylvania and three killed in Louisiana is $145 in U. S. money, at least so far as the bounty division of the board of game commissioners is concerned.

Despite the similarity in size and color of three pelts offered recently to the bounty board for payment, members of the board easily detected the difference between a Pennsylvania cat and one from the braves of a southern state.

Investigations disclosed the cats had been killed in Louisiana. Instead of collecting $45 in bounties, the hunter paid $100 in fines.

BECOMES COUNTESS; FLEECE BY CROOK

Kansas Woman Comes to Grief in France.

Paris.—Things have happened quickly since the day Mrs. Pearl Hussey Flanagan, a music teacher and wife of an undertaker in Wichita, Kan., walked up the steps of the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart, in Paris, France. Events have followed each other almost too quickly, for when Mrs. Flanagan walked down the steps she was Countess de Taurine and owned the Chateau de Taurine, a massive old structure of rough hewn stone.

Now Mrs. Flanagan owns nothing. She plans again to take up the teaching of music where she left off, and she must begin soon, for the law took away from her her fur coat, dresses, stockings, and even underwear. Besides, her husband is suing her for divorce.

When she entered the cathedral in Paris, Mrs. Flanagan met the Abbe Loubiere. She told him of her ambition to establish a school of music in France, and her seriousness so impressed him that he asked her to accept the chateau as a nucleus about which to build the school. The abbe had served in the World war, among American troops, and was not averse to paying some tribute to America. Mrs. Flanagan then learned she had become Countess de Taurine under French civil law.

Seeking to obtain a manager, Mrs. Flanagan in Kansas City hired Charles F. Faye to conduct the business end of her music school abroad. Faye, given a free hand, began the floating of stock, stair-stepping the prices. He had been arrested before for raising a check, but Mrs. Flanagan did not know that. When the crash came Faye went to jail and the countess was in debt $5,000. Besides, there was a tax of 60 per cent on the chateau in France. Constables left the "countess"—or Mrs. Flanagan now—with the house dress she was wearing when they departed from the music school.

Scientist Would Study Sun at Close Range

Brussels.—Working closer to the sun than has any human being before him, so far as is known, Prof. Andre Piccard of Brussels university and an assistant hope to study the cosmic rays at a height of nearly 50,000 feet. The professor plans to reach this dizzy height in an especially made balloon with a closed cabin.

Professor Piccard says the cosmic rays are the key to the atmospheric conditions of the earth, and that his initiative may lead to all commercial airplanes using the upper layers for travel rather than the stormy regions close to the earth.

King Albert's $13,800,000 fund for scientific research will finance the venture, which will cost about $15,000.

Woman Ends Life After Her Pet Cat Is Killed

Charlotte, N. C.—Despondent over the death of her cat, Mrs. Dorothy Davis, forty years old, of this city, leaped to her death from a hotel window.

Police say she told them she had nothing to live for after her pet Persian cat, "Fan Tan," had been poisoned.

Musician Wills Son Nothing but Remorse

Lincoln, Neb.—That his son, "may reflect in remorse forever upon the wrong he has done me," Edward H. Schafer, Lincoln musician, left him in his will a photograph and a penny. He left an estate amounting to $16,500.

Saw Slate With Wire

Washington.—Wire and sand were introduced by scientists of the bureau of mines two years ago as a saw for slate quarrying. Now Oliver Bowles, supervising engineer of the bureau, believes that wire saws, which already have revolutionized the quarrying, soon may supplant the expensive circular saws of the finishing plant.

Electricity Great Aid

to Market Gardeners

Electrical gardening has proved to be a practical and economically profitable occupation in Sweden. Although the recent winter was one of the hardest in history, such garden products as "home-grown raspberries," cucumbers and the most delicate of garden flowers have been available at all times. In the gardens near Hamlingby, a small town north of Stockholm, 10,000 tulips, 1,500 lilies-of-the-valley, and 1,500 hyacinths were raised during January, all in ground electrically heated and under the artificial light of electric lamps. The operating expense of the electrical system was found to be negligible. The most difficult phase of the work is found in supplying various types of plants with the particular variety of light which they require, the lamps suitable for roses, for example, being unsuited to the development of carnations. There are 300 so-called "electro-horticultural" stations in Sweden, all of which are carrying on experiments in the artificial production of flowers and vegetables.

THE PUBLIC FORGETS

To the business man who thinks the public does not need to be constantly reminded of who he is and what he has to sell, the often told story of Pyle's Pearlline will bear repeating.

In 1904 Pearlline, a cleaning material, was used by a large percentage of the housewives of the country, and the company spent $500,000 in advertising that year. Later the advertising was curtailed, and about 1907 it was discontinued altogether, as the company thought the product was so well known that it did not require further advertising.

Sales fell off rapidly, but the owners persisted in their non-advertising policy until 1915, when the whole concern, including good will, was dead.

Many other products whose names were household words a few years ago are not heard of today because they failed to keep up their advertising and consequently the public forgot them.

Business men must remember that new generations are coming along all the time, and these new buyers must be personally sold on a product or a store, as their fathers and mothers were sold before them. The only time it is safe to stop advertising is when one is ready to go out of business.

TRAGEDY AS TEACHER

It seems that it often takes an appalling tragedy to impress mankind with the necessity for ordinary safety precautions, and even tragedy fails to teach its lessons in most cases.

The first systematic efforts to make theaters fireproof followed the Iroquois fire in Chicago in 1903, when 574 persons lost their lives, although 600 had died in a theater fire in Trenton, N. J., as far back as 1872, and 283 had met a similar fate in Brooklyn in 1876.

DREAMS COMING TRUE

When Herbert Hoover became secretary of commerce in 1921 he doubtless dreamed of a great department of the government devoted to the interests of our commercial life, and possibly envisioned a splendid building to house its many activities. If so, his dreams are coming true.

Using the same trowel and gavel with which President Washington set the cornerstone of the national capitol in 1793, President Hoover recently laid the cornerstone of the new $17,500,000 commerce building on Pennsylvania avenue, which is to be the largest office structure of its kind in the world. It will be 1,050 feet long, 325 feet wide and seven stories above ground. There will be more than a million square feet of floor space and it will house nearly 7,000 workers.

To haul the stone for the building would require a train of 1,280 cars, according to President A. E. Dickinson of the Indian Limestone company, which holds this greatest stone contract in history. There also will be required 20,000 tons of structural steel and 160,000 square feet of glass for the windows. Under the contract the massive structure must be completed in 1,100 calendar days, and the first material is now being prepared for the job.

This great building is one of several authorized by the act of 1926, involving a total expenditure of some fifty million dollars. When this program is completed Washington will be the most magnificent capital in the world, and a source of inspiration and pride for every American.

THE SPEEDY BREMEN

While airplane records of various kinds seldom hold good for more than a few days or a few weeks, ship records often stand unbroken for many years. Therefore, the new transatlantic record set a few days ago by the great German liner Bremen on her maiden voyage from Cherbourg to New York is something more than just another stunt.

The Bremen's time in crossing was 4 days, 18 hours and 17 minutes, or 8 hours and 17 minutes faster than that of the Mauretania, which has been the queen of the seas for several years. It is estimated that the caravels of Columbus, had they followed present-day steamer lanes, would have taken 69 days to reach the New World.

The Savannah, the first steamer to cross the Atlantic, took 26 days between Savannah and Liverpool in 1819. In 1840 the Britannia, first Cunard liner, steamed from Liverpool to New York in 14 days 8 hours. In 1869 the Brussels made the same voyage in 7 days 22 hours.

Considering the comparatively slowness with which steamer speed has been increased, the feat of the Bremen is all the more remarkable. It gives rival steamship companies a shining mark to shoot at.

OWEN D. YOUNG, THE MAN

All the world knows of the achievements of Owen D. Young, the American business man who was a member of the committee which formulated the Dawes plan for a temporary adjustment of war reparations payments, and who only recently headed a second committee which arranged the Young Compromise, settling the reparations question permanently.

But how he reached his present eminence in world affairs is not so well known. Perhaps he could not explain it himself. The story is another illustration of what America offers to ambitious and energetic youth.

Born in 1874 on a farm near Van Hornesville, N. Y., his early life was similar to that of the average farm boy. He attended school in a nearby town, and of this period he says: "I came home every Friday night and on Monday morning my father would drive me back to school with a cheese box full of provisions in the rear end of the wagon."

Finishing high school, he had his first train ride at the age of 16, when he went to St. Lawrence University in Canton and worked his way through. Then he worked his way through the Boston University law school, from which he was graduated in 1896. He began practice in Boston, specializing in corporation law, became general counsel of the General Electric Company and later chairman; is also chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America and a director in many other large corporations.

Mr Young married at the age of 23; is the father of five children, one of whom died; he spends a part of each summer on the farm, breeds Holstein cattle, collects rare books and is too busy for golf. He is especially interested in the welfare of the laboring classes and in a betterment of social conditions generally. He is an American farm boy who has made good in an extraordinary way.

Professor Munroe of Long Island University declares that poor food is responsible for much low intelligence. We have long suspected that low intelligence was responsible for much poor food.

We shudder to think what we might buy if we ran up against one of these fellows who learned high-powered salesmanship by correspondence.

Mr. Wickersham's remarks about enforcement have evoked almost as much discussion as the famous phrase, "I do not choose to run."

And then there was the cub reporter who went home without writing anything about the wedding because the groom dropped dead.

A lit-up driver is a poor substitute for headlights.

Leo Graziani, assistant manager of the Colma branch Bank of Italy, and wife left during the early part of this week on a motor trip to Southern California, where they will enjoy a two weeks vacation.

Mrs. R. Raisenetti, of South San Francisco, a former resident of Colma, entertained a group of friends last Thursday afternoon. The deer hunters of Colma are surely "bringing home the bacon," having been on display at Matt Grady's meat market during the past week. The following members of the Colma Gun Club have been out doing their best to increase the number, the first five being the fortunate hunters to bring one home: Fred Volkman, Leo Domicus, George Grozemes, Tom Ayres, Joe Garibaldi, Steve Waterdall, Ed Ver Linden, Fred Bauer, Joe Paccini, Richard Oleese, John Lazzerini, Joe Paccini, John Soldovani and Harold Varni. The deer were all shot near Colma, three coming from the Jersey Farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Callan were delightfully surprised last Saturday evening, in honor of the twentieth anniversary of their wedding. During the evening they were presented with a beautiful set of six hand-painted cups, saucers and plates, with a large cake plate to match, a gift from their friends. A huge wedding cake, a gift from Mr. Callan's sister, Mrs. Katherine Fitzpatrick, sent from Portland, occupied the center of the table. The evening will long be remembered by the following friends: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fahey, Mr. and Mrs. A. Lowans and son Archie, Mr. and Mrs. W. Falbusch and daughters June and Patricia, Mr. and Mrs. J. Horkey, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Martinelli and son Billie, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Lippi and daughter Lois, Miss Gladys Callan, Miss Tuddie Silicani, Miss Ida Silicani, Miss Dorothy Dennis, Miss Rose Ballenger, Frank Eserine, Frank Breganti, John Garibaldi, Bill Hutley, and Lester Ver Linden.

AN INGENIOUS DEVICE GIVES WARNING SIGNAL

Inevitably, in so complicated an electrical network as that of the telephone, "the bowsprit gets mixed with the rudder sometimes" and a fuse blows—but not for long.

A fuse which not only blows but attracts attention by waving an arm and clamoring for help is one of the many ingenious devices which keep the telephone message from being delayed. Among the myriad fuses protecting the delicate apparatus from an overload of current, it would be hard indeed to search out a blown fuse, were it of the ordinary type. Accordingly Bell System Engineers have developed a fuse which rings an alarm, lights a lamp indicating the affected fuse bank, and throws out an individual signal when it is burned out. The telephone system uses annually over a million of these fuses.

Wouldn't a modern girl look effeminate weeding one of these feathered fans of bygone days?

POISONOUS CLAMS FATAL FOR FOUR

Residents of this section are advised to refrain from eating mussels or clams, until the quarantine has been lifted by the State Board of Health.

Four deaths attributed to poisonous clams has resulted in official action by the State Board of Health.

Following the deaths on Monday of William and Harry Keegan, farmers at Roblar Station, Dr. Walter M. Dickey, head of the board ordered warning signs posted at Bodega Beach and Tomales Bay.

The Keegan brothers were stricken almost simultaneously a few hours after eating clams dug at Tomales Bay. William died at the home, his brother succumbing in an ambulance enroute to a Petaluma hospital.

The death of Thomas Venezia, San Francisco fisherman, at Sebastopol, Saturday night, which at first was believed due to the victim eating mussels obtained at Bodega Beach, was attributed by a coroner's jury to poisonous clams.

News comes from Sacramento that Emanuel Fernandez, who died Saturday night, was poisoned by mussels dug up at Bolinas Bay.

Doctor Dickey, in San Francisco, declared that while a quarantine has been placed on commercial collection of mussels from Monterey to Eureka, there has been on quarantine on clams, inasmuch as there were no known polluted clam beds.

"We will quarantine these districts," Doctor Dickey said, "if our examinations of clams taken from the beach prove them to be poisonous."

GREAT WEEK OF HITS AT DALY CITY THEATRE

It's just another big week of hits for the Daly City Theatre, starting with today's double bill attractions. Chester Conklin, that ever popular star "comic" will hold the feature spot with "Taxi 13," a big screen picture, and Ranger, the dog star, in "Tracked," a big thrill picture of the great outdoors. At the matinee there will be candy for the kiddies and the serial "Vultures of the Sea," which plays its final episode today. There will be free silver for the ladies at night.

For Sunday the Daly City Theatre will present Snooky White and his merry comedians in another delightful musical playlet, and the screen feature will be "Tropic Madness," a fiery romance of the South Seas, with Leatrice Joy and a large cast of screen favorites. Sunday performances play continuously from 2 to 11, and many attend the matinee performances to avoid the night crowds at this popular playhouse.

Monday night is Silver Night, when every lady attending will receive a beautiful piece of silverware free. On the screen "Stolen Love" will be the feature attraction. It is Hazel Livingston's big Hearts Magazine special and has for the stars Owen Moore and Marceline Day.

Tuesday will bring the first run showing of Paramount's massive special "Interference," with William Powell, Clive Brook, Evelyn Brent and Doris Kenyon in the noteworthy cast of players.

For Wednesday another big special will hold the silver screen when "The Bellamy Trial" will be the attraction from Metro Goldwyn Mayers' lot of specials. The cast of players include Betty Bronson, Leatrice Joy, Edward Nugent, Margaret Livingston and a host of other players.

Wallace Beery, with Florence Vidor and Warner Oland, will have the top spot for Thursday, when they will unfold the mysteries of "Chinatown Nights" on the Daly City screen. Sam and his Country Store and Ben Lyon and Dorothy Revere in "The Quilter" will be the attractions for Friday.

DEVIL TURNED SAINT

Thirty years ago, when the Standard Oil Company was considered an outstanding menace, John D. Rockefeller was probably the most hated man in America. That the methods employed by him in building up his great fortune were often ruthless and against the public interest in those days can hardly be denied.

But now, at the age of 90, this same man finds himself beloved almost as cordially as he was formerly hated. In the meantime he has given away more than five hundred and fifty million dollars for the benefit of mankind.

His benefactions touch the health and life of every person in the civilized world, and many who are still in a semi-savage state. Largely through his gifts in aid of scientific research yellow fever, which annually took its toll of thousands, has been practically banished from the earth. In 1927 only three cases were reported in both North and South America. Likewise hookworm, typhoid fever, diphtheria, malaria, smallpox, leprosy and other diseases have been wholly or partially conquered through the millions poured into the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research and the Rockefeller Foundation.

Many other millions have been devoted to the cause of education, thirty-one million dollars having been given to the University of Chicago alone and gifts for all these worthy purposes are being continued from year to year.

Thus, through a series of benefactions without a parallel in the history of the world, John D. Rockefeller has been transformed in public estimation from a devil of the past to a saint of the present.

STORY FROM THE START

Athol Meldrum, young Scotsman, starts out to seek his fortune. He arrives at San Francisco practically broke and meets a fellow adventurer whom he dubs the Prodigal. With Jim Hubbard they join the gold rush to Alaska. On the boat Athol meets Berna, a young woman traveling with her grandfather and a hard looking couple named Winklestein who figure as her aunt and uncle. Landing at Skagway, Athol's party at once takes the trail. In a snowslide on the Chilcoot trail, which Berna and her companions had taken, hundreds of lives are lost. Fearful for Berna's safety, Athol hastens to the scene. He finds the old man dead. At Bennett, Berna comes to Athol, confesses her love, and begs him to marry her, to save her from the harsh fate she foresees. He is unwilling to take such a decisive step, and tells her they must wait. Some days afterward Berna tells Athol that Winklestein plans to sell her to "Black Jack" Locasto, millionaire miner of evil reputation. Reaching the gold fields, Athol and his party find the claims all taken. Unable to locate Berna, Athol seeks information from Locasto. "Black Jack" disclaims knowledge of her whereabouts, and lures Meldrum to a lonely spot and beats him into unconsciousness. Through a lucky chance Athol finds Berna. They set a date for their marriage, the first of June. The Prodigal secures a claim and he, "Salvation Jim," and Athol begin work on it. The Winklesteins have opened a questionable resort known as the Paragon and Berna is there, as a waitress.

"Berna," boomed the rough, cantankerous voice of Madam, "attend to the customers."

"All right," I said; "get me anything. I just wanted to see you."

She hurried away. Presently she came hurrying round, bringing me some food.

"When can I see you, girl?" I asked. "Tonight. See me home. I'm off at midnight."

"All right. I'll be waiting."

I wandered up and down the now familiar street, but the keen edge of my impression had been blunted. I no longer took the same interest in its sights. More populous it was, noisier, livelier than ever. Success was in the air. Men were drunk with it; carried off their feet, delirious. Money! It had lost its value. Every one you met was "lousy" with it; threw it away with both hands, and fast as they emptied one pocket it filled up the others.

At midnight, at the door of the Paragon, I was waiting in a fever of impatience when Berna came out. She showed a vast joy at seeing me.

"Tell me what you've been doing, dear—everything. Have you made a stake? So many have. I have prayed you would, too. Then we'll go away somewhere and forget all this. Won't we, honey?"

She nestled up to me. She seemed to have lost much of her shyness. I didn't know why, but I preferred my timid, shrinking Berna.

"It will take a whole lot to make me forget this," I said grimly.

"Yes, I know. Isn't it frightful? Somehow I don't seem to mind so much now. I'm getting used to it, I suppose. It's wonderful how we get accustomed to things, isn't it?"

"Yes," I answered bitterly.

"You know, I've had several offers of marriage, too, really, really good ones from wealthy claim-owners."

"Yes," still more bitterly.

"Yes, young man; so you want to make a strike and take me away. Oh, how I plan and plan for us two. I don't care, my dearest. If you haven't got a cent in the world, I'm yours, always yours."

"That's all right, Berna," I said. "I'm going to make good. I've just lost a fifty-thousand dollar claim, but there's more coming up. By the first of June next I'll come to you with a bank account of six figures. You'll see, my little girl. I'm going to make this thing stick."

"You foolish boy," she said; "it doesn't matter if you come to me a beggar in rags. Come to me anyway. Come, and do not fail."

She was extraordinarily affectionate, full of unexpected little ways of endearment, and clung to me when we parted, making me promise to return very soon. Every look, every word, every act of her expressed a bright, fine, radiant love. I was satisfied, yet unsatisfied, and once again I treated her.

"Berna, are you sure, quite sure, you're all right in that place among all that folly and drunkenness and vice? Let me take you away, dear."

"Oh, no," she said very tenderly; "I'm all right. I would tell you at once, my boy, if I had any fear. Good-by, darling."

"Good-by, beloved."

I went away, trading on sunshine, trembling with joy, thrilled with love for her, blessing her anew.

Yet still the rouge stuck in my crop as if it were the symbol of some invidious decadence.

CHAPTER IX

It was about two months later when I returned from a flying visit to Dawson. "Lots of mail for you two," I cried, exultantly bursting into the cabin. Jim and the Prodigal, who were lying on their bunks, leapt up eagerly. For two whole months we had not heard from the outside.

I threw myself on my bunk voluptuously, and began re-reading my letters. There were some from Garry and some from mother. While still unreconciled to the life I was leading, they were greatly interested in my wildly cheerful accounts of the country. For my part I was only too glad mother was well enough to write, even if she did scold me sometimes.

But I was still aglow with memories of the last few hours. Once more I had seen Berna, spent moments with her of perfect bliss, left her with my mind full of exaltation and bewildered gratitude. I saw the love mists gather in her eyes, I felt her sweet lips mold themselves to mine, I thrilled with the sheathing ardor of her arms. Never in my fondest imaginings had I conceived that such a wealth of affection would ever be for me.

Then I remembered something. "Oh, say, boys, I forgot to tell you. I met McCrimmon down the creek. You remember him on the trail, the halfbreed. He said he wanted to see us on important business. He has a proposal to make, he says, that would be greatly to our advantage. He's coming along this evening—What's the matter, Jim?"

Jim was staring blankly at one of the letters he had received. His face was a picture of distress, misery, despair.

"Had bad news, old man?"

"I've had a letter that's upset me. I'm in a terrible position. If ever I wanted strength and guidance, I want it now."

"Heard about that man?"

"Yes, it's him, all right; it's Mosher. I suspicioned it all along. Here's a letter from my brother. He says there's no doubt that Mosher is Moseley."

His eyes were stormy, his face tragic in its bitterness.

"Oh, you don't know how I worshiped that woman, trusted her, would have banked my life on her; and when I was away making money for her she ups and goes away with that slimy reptile. What am I to do? What am I to do? The Good Book says forgive your enemies, but how can I forgive a wrong like that? And my poor girl—she deserted her, drove her to the streets. Oh, my girl, my girl!"

Tears overran his cheeks. He sat down on a log, burying his face in his hands.

I was at a loss how to comfort him, and it was while I was waiting there that suddenly we saw the halfbreed coming up the trail.

"Better come in, Jim," I said, "and hear what he's got to say."

We made McCrimmon comfortable. Jim regained his calm, and was quietly watchful. The Prodigal seemed to have his ears cocked to listen. There was a feeling amongst us as if we had reached a crisis in our fortunes.

The halfbreed lost no time in coming to the point. "I've got next to a good thing—I don't know how good yet, but I'll swear to you it's a tidy bit. It's a gambling proposition, and I want partners, partners that'll work like blazes and keep their faces shut. Are you on?"

"That's got us kodaked," said the Prodigal. "We're that sort, and if the proposition looks good to us we're with you. Anyway, we're clams at keeping our food-traps tight."

"All right; listen. You know the Arctic Transportation company have claims on upper Bonanza—well, a month back I was working for them. Well, one morning I went down and cleaned away the ash of my fire. The first stroke of my pick on the thawed face made me jump, stare, stand stockstill, thinking hard. For there, right in the hole I had made, was the richest pocket I ever seen. Boys, as I'm alive there was nuggets in it as thick as raisins in a Christmas plum-duff."

"Good Lord! What did you do?"

"What did I do! I just stepped back and picked wherever the dirt seemed loose all the way down the drift. Great heaps of dirt caved in on me. I was stunned, nearly buried, but I did the trick. There were tons of dirt between me and my find."

We gasped with amazement.

"The rest was easy. I went up the shaft groaning and cursing. I pretended to faint. I told them the roof of the drift had fallen in on me. It was rotten stuff, anyway, and they knew it. The manager was disgusted, he went down and took a look at things; declared he would throw up the work at that place; the ground was no good. He made that report to the company."

The halfbreed looked round triumphantly.

"Now, here's the point. We can get a lay on that ground. One of you boys must apply for it. They mustn't know I'm in with you, or they would suspect right away. We'll make a big clean-up by spring. I'll take you right to the gold. There's thousands and thousands lying snug in the ground just waiting for us. It's right in our mit. Oh, it's a cinch, a cinch! If you boys are willing we'll just draw up papers and sign an agreement right away. Is it a go?"

"There's Many and Many a Pan Like It Down There."

We nodded, so he got ink and paper and drew up a form of partnership. "Now," said he, his eyes dancing, "now, to secure that lay before anyone else cuts in on us. Gee! but it's getting dark and cold outdoors these days. Snow falling; well, I must rush to Dawson tonight."

It was late next night when he returned, tired, wet, dirty, but irrepressibly jubilant.

"Hurrah, boys!" he cried. "I've clinched it. I saw Mister Manager of the big company. He was very busy, very important, very patronizing. We sparred round a bit like two fake fighters. Finally he agreed to let me have it on a 50 per cent basis. Don't faint, boys. Fifty per cent, I said. I'm sorry. It was the best I could do, and you know I'm not slow. That means they get half of all we take out. We signed the lay agreement, and everything's in shape. We've got the ground clinched, so get action on yourselves. Here's where we make our first stab at fortune. Here's where we even upon the hard jabs she's handed us in the past; here's where we score a bull's-eye, or I miss my guess. We're going to work for all we're worth—and then some. Are you there, boys, are you there?"

"We are," we shouted with one accord.

There was no time to lose. Every hour for us meant so much more of that precious pay-dirt that lay under the frozen surface. We ran up a little cabin and banked it nearly to the low eaves with snow. By and by more fell on the roof to the depth of three feet, so that the place seemed like a huge white hummock. In this little box of a home we were to put in many weary months.

Nor that the time seemed long to us; we were too busy for that. Indeed, often we wished it were twice as long. We didn't talk much in those days. We just worked, worked, worked, and when we did talk it was of our work, our ceaseless work.

Neither cold nor fatigue could keep us away from the shaft and the drift. We had gone down to bed-rock, and were tunneling in to meet the hole the halfbreed had covered up. So far we had found nothing.

We were working two men to a shaft, burning our ground overnight. Our meals were hurriedly cooked and bolted. We grudged every moment of our respite from toil. Surely we would strike it soon.

Then, one afternoon, the Something happened. It was Jim who was the chosen one. About three o'clock he signaled to be hoisted up, and when he appeared he was carrying a pan of dirt. "Call the others," he said.

All together in the little cabin we stood round, while Jim washed over the pan in snow water melted over our stove. We could see gleams of yellow in the muddy water. We had got the thing, the big thing, at last.

"Hurry, Jim," I said, "or I'll die of suspense."

Patiently he went on. There it was at last in the bottom of the pan, glittering, gleaming gold, fine gold, coarse gold, nuggety gold.

"Now, boys, you can whoop it up," said Jim quietly; "for there's many and many a pan like it down there in the drift."

Solemnly we shook hands all round.

It was the night of the discovery when the Prodigal made us an address.

"Look here, boys; do you know what this means? It means victory; it means freedom, happiness, the things we want, the life we love. We're going to get every cent of it, boys. There's a little over three months to do it in, leaving about a month to make sluice-boxes and clean up the dirt. We've got to work like men at a burning barn. For my part, I'm willing to do stunts that will make my previous record look like a plugged dime. I guess you boys all feel the same way."

"You bet we do."

"Nuf sed; let's get busy."

So, once more, with redoubled energy, we resumed our tense, unremitting round of toil. It proved a most erratic and puzzling paystreak—one day rich beyond our dreams, another too poor to pay for the panning. We swung on a pendulum of hope and despair.

Looking back, there will always seem to me something weird and incomprehensible in those twilight days, an unreality, a vagueness like some dreary, feverish dream. For three months I did not see my face in a mirror. Not that I wanted to, but I mention this just to show how little we thought of ourselves.

It was mid-March when we finished working out our ground. We had done well, not so well, perhaps, as we had hoped for, but still magnificently well. There were our two dumps, pyramids of gold-permeated dirt at whose value we could only guess. We had wrested our treasure from the icy grip of the eternal frost. Now it remained—and Oh, the sweetness of it—to glean the harvest of our toil.

We were working at the mouth of a creek down which ran a copious little stream all through the springtime. We tapped it some distance above us, and ran part of it along our line of sluice-boxes. I remember how I threw in the first shovelful of dirt, and how good it was to see the bright stream discolor as our friend the water began his magic work. For three days we shoveled in, and on the fourth we made a clean-up.

When we ran off the water there were some of the boxes almost full of the yellow metal, wet and shiny, gloriously agleam in the morning light.

Day after day we went on shoveling in, and about twice a week we made a clean-up. The month of May was half over when we had only a third of our dirt run through the boxes. We were terribly afraid of the water failing us, and worked harder than ever.

One afternoon I was working on the dump, intent on shoveling in as much dirt as possible before supper, when, on looking up, who should greet me but Locasto. He held out his great hand to me, and, as I had no desire to antagonize him, I gave him my own.

"I've just been visiting some of my creek properties," he said. "I heard you fellows had made a good strike, and I thought I'd come down and congratulate you. It is pretty good, isn't it?"

"Yes," I said; "not quite so good as we expected, but we'll all have a tidy sum."

"I'm glad."

BROWNIES' PARTY

Billie Brownie had offered prizes to the ones who blew the funniest, the most beautiful, the ugliest and the largest soap bubbles, for the brownies were having a soap bubble party down by the pond.

The brownies all blew pretty nice ones, so Billie was having a hard time deciding on the winners.

They had been blowing bubbles for quite awhile and had been laughing and enjoying themselves so much when they heard a sound from the pond.

"Goog-a-room, goog-a-room, goog-a-room."

"What's that?" asked the brownies. They stopped blowing bubbles to find out.

"Goog-a-room, goog-a-room, goog-a-room," came the sound again.

"Why hello, Grandpa Frog," said Billie Brownie.

"Whatever are you doing?" asked Grandpa Frog.

"Blowing soap bubbles," said Billie. "Want to come and join the fun?"

"We'd be glad to have you. Yes, indeed, we would."

And all the brownies said: "We'd be glad to have Grandpa Frog come and join us on our log."

"Well," said Grandpa Frog, "that is a pretty nice invitation. But tell me how do you make those queer things?"

Some of the brownies had commenced blowing bubbles again.

"You see," said Billie Brownie, "we have some brown bowls which the Fairy Queen once gave us at a party. These we have filled with pond water."

"I have plenty of that," said Grandpa Frog with a grin.

"And in the bowls we have some of the brownies' soap."

"What, pray tell, is that?" asked Grandpa Frog.

"It's the soap with which we make the bubbles—it's our very own and

"Want to Come and Join the Fun?" we use this particular kind just for our bubbles.

"Sometimes—sometimes—sometimes—" and Billie Brownie walked over very close to Grandpa Frog and leaned down to whisper to him this secret:

"Sometimes," he continued, "we throw some of this soap into the bowls for children who are blowing bubbles and then their bubbles become all the better."

"They don't know why it is—but I'm telling you the secret."

Grandpa Frog blinked his eyes. He was quite excited.

"But what are those queer things you are using?" he asked, as he put on his spectacles to have a good look.

"They are pipes, my dear good sir. Clay pipes, and the Elves gave us those at one of their parties."

"May I blow bubbles, too?" asked Grandpa Frog.

The brownies were delighted at the very thought.

"I'd like to ask some of the other frogs, too," he added.

So he called "goog-a-room, goog-a-room, goog-a-room" across the pond and told them to come to a party.

Lots of frogs arrived.

Then Billie Brownie showed them how to blow soap bubbles.

All afternoon the brownies and the frogs had the most exciting time blowing the most wonderful soap bubbles that were ever made.

Little Milton came home from Sunday school with a mite box.

"Why do they call it a mite box, mother?" asked Milton.

"Because," chirped in his brother, "you might put something in it and you might not."—The Churchman.
